ZP Dala, a debut novelist and PEN South Africa member, was subjected to a severe physical assault and harassment after she expressed admiration for the work of Salman Rushdie amongst others. Instead of celebrating the launch of her first novel at the Durban Time of the Writer Festival she was hospitalised. Freedom of expression, freedom of thought is the foundational democratic right. PEN South Africa and the world PEN community stands in solidarity with Ms Dala. We are proud to publish her response to the intimidation and threats to which she was subjected.

My Writing Journey

by ZP Dala

The week beginning 15 March 2015 was supposed to have been the highlight of my literary career. I was due to launch my debut novel What About Meera in a prestigious function on Saturday, 21 March and preceding this I was the featured author at one of South Africa's most sought after literary festivals, The Time of the Writer. The theme of the 2015 Festival was "Writing For Our Lives" and in the wake of the atrocious Charlie Hebdo tragedy as well as the gagging of Bangladeshi writer, Tasleema Nasreen who was forced into exile after being attacked, the group of African writers that assembled for the festival felt a deep sense of poignancy to speak out for freedom of expression.

I was no different. Here was my opportunity to have my voice heard! In a country like South Africa which had suffered the horrors of apartheid just a mere 20 years ago, all us writers felt a responsibility to speak our truths....read more
