Junkets Competition – Deadline = Sunday, 27th April 2014

Dear Friends of Junkets

23rd April 2014 - Today is Shakespeare's 450th birthday!

So, here's a quick Hamlet quiz, just to celebrate. Get all five right and you could be one of two Friends of Junkets to win a copy of Lord Hamlet aka iHamlet.

- 1 'Hamlet is Shakespeare's longest play and Hamlet is Shakespeare's longest part.' True or False?

- 2 The first word Hamlet speaks in the play and the last word he utters as he dies make up an ironic comment on this most wordy of plays. What are the two words?
- 3 'How now? A rat? Dead for a ducat, dead!' Who did Hamlet think the 'rat' was?
- 4 What is the title of Tom Stoppard's play in which the main Hamlet characters play minor roles and the two leads are taken by two minor characters in Shakespeare's play?
- 5 In the late-1960s the American-British actor and writer Charles Marowitz wrote a collage of Hamlet which was acclaimed. What was it called? (This is easier than it looks! Google will give you the answer.)

... and one that doesn't count: What was the name of Horatio's girlfriend?

You've got only a few days to submit your answers, together with your postal address – get your entries in by midnight on Sunday 27 April, Freedom Day! Email to info.junkets@iafrica.com ...

SEXUALITY AND THE LAW: A DEBATE ON CULTURAL POLITICS IN AFRICA WITH SOUTH AFRICAN PEN

In light of this new wave of legislation and persecution, South African PEN held a conversation between Professor Pierre de Vos, the Claude Leon Foundation Chair in Constitutional Governance at the University of Cape Town and a well-known writer for the ‘Daily Maverick’, and Professor Desiree Lewis, the Head of Department of Women and Gender Studies at University of Western Cape and feminist activist. Dr. Derrick Higginbotham (UCT, English Department), who teaches queer theory and LGBTI literature, chaired the discussion which explored issues of sexuality minorities, human rights, religion, and the law in Africa

Why Should We Vote For You? Campaign

1st April 2014

Arterial Network of South Africa, in association with diverse arts, culture and heritage organisations, today launched a major South African advocacy campaign to position the broad sector, across disciplines, as an important election issue in our country.

The campaign centres on a letter to all political parties in South Africa, asking them why people working in the arts, culture and heritage sector in South Africa should vote for them.

The organisations call on political parties to engage in a national conversation about the role of the creative sector in our country. It is also asking arts, culture and heritage organisations and individuals to endorse the project and calls on artists, designers, writers, performers, musicians, heritage workers, filmmakers and all practitioners and producers working in these and related fields to create work inspired by the question: Why should we vote for you?

Speaking on behalf of the campaign, the Secretary General of Arterial Network South Africa, Valmont

Layne, says, “We believe cultural life and artistic creativity is a human right and not a luxury, and that all South Africans have this right. We hear a lot of lip-service to the need for social cohesion, imagination and homegrown innovation and we agree that our sector is best placed to inspire and contribute to that need. Yet the arts and our cultural lives are often marginalised. This is obvious in budget allocations, consultation processes and a general lack of respect for our contribution and, more significantly, our potential contribution.”

Layne continues: “We are confident that through the work of creative practitioners, including writers, journalists, curators, painters, performers, sculptors, dancers, poets, musicians, filmmakers, designers and artists working in experimental forms, we are influential. We aim to manifest that influence through this campaign and put the spotlight on our sectors plight – and its power.”

In addition to requesting that political parties respond to the question Why should we vote for you? the letter addressed to them includes a number of related questions including:

1. Does your party think arts, culture and heritage is a priority for South Africa?
2. Does your party support our sector in South Africa and in which ways?
3. What are your policies for arts, culture and heritage?
4. What would you change about current arts, culture and heritage policy in South Africa?
5. Is your party aware of the current proposed revision to South Africa’s White Paper on Arts Culture and Heritage, the process of submissions to it and its current status?
6. What does your party think about the National Development Plan in terms of the arts, culture and heritage environment?
7. Is your party aware of current public funding budgets and priorities for our sector in South Africa – in terms of published plans and realities?
8. Does your party use our sector to market itself either during the election build-up or before / after that?

9. How do you think creativity can contribute to community development, poverty alleviation and job creation in South Africa?
10. What is your policy on arts, culture and heritage education for children and adults?

As part of the campaign, practitioners and leaders in the sector will participate in debates and activities during the election build-up and the campaign will post news, responses and related information via social media.

Campaign Endorsements as of 3rd April 2014:

Academic and Non Fiction Authors' Association of South Africa (ANFASA), The Archival Platform, Egoli Heritage Foundation, The Heritage Portal, Institute for Arts Management and Development, Northwest University (ARTEMA), ASSITEJ South Africa, My Dream for the Arts, South African National Youth Orchestra Foundation, South African PEN (SA PEN), Performing Arts Network of South Africa (PANSA), South African Music Rights Organisation (SAMRO), UNIMA - Puppetry South Africa, Visual Arts Network of South Africa (VANSA), Writers' Guild of South Africa.

New Fringe Festival for Cape Town

Press Release – 15th April 2014

The National Arts Festival and the City of Cape Town today announced a partnership which will see the launch of a new performing arts festival in September, modelled on some of the world's iconic events.

The new Cape Town Fringe is inspired by the energy and ethos of popular Fringe Festivals in New York, Amsterdam, Adelaide and Edinburgh, and will feature “young, dynamic and cutting edge” work from some of the country's leading theatremakers, according to Festival CEO Tony Lankester.

The Cape Town Fringe aims to present around 40 productions in venues in and around the city centre, as well as in satellite venues in areas such as Langa. “Access is critical to the success of a Fringe and was a big factor in our decision to proceed with this project,” Executive Deputy Mayor, Ian Neilson, acting Mayoral Committee Member for Tourism, Events and Marketing said. “Ticket pricing, choice of venues as well as the scheduling of performances all contribute to making a Fringe Festival appeal to as many people as possible, both traditional and non-traditional theatergoing audiences,” Neilson continued.

A public call for proposals was made at the launch of the event, with the Festival's Artistic Director, Ismail Mahomed, saying that organisers were looking for work that is “brash, bold, cheeky, outspoken, confident, socially aware and independent”.

The Cape Town Fringe will run from 25th September until 5th October 2014. The call for proposals is currently open and more information can be found at www.capetownfringe.co.za

Global Citizen Journalism Project

Dear PEN Colleagues,

As part of a new initiative – the Global Citizen Journalism Project - PEN International is working with The Global Poverty Project to build a network of on-the-ground journalists from across the globe to share local stories on both the Global Citizen and PEN International websites.

The global poverty project is looking to the PEN membership to recruit at least twenty international correspondents from around the world to tell local stories of challenges faced and progress made, and to become part of a movement of global citizens who are committed to taking action in support of the world's poor and seeing an end to extreme poverty by 2030.

Currently the issues that we'd like the reports and pitch ideas to focus on are:

- Education
- Women and girls
- Enterprise and innovation

Please submit any questions and pitch stories to Emily Burgess, Global Communications Coordinator at the Global Poverty Project: emily.burgess@globalpovertyproject.com or Sahar Halaimzai: Sahar.halaimzai@pen-international.org

Ed's note: It seems that contributors will be remunerated for their submissions.

Members' Publications

The Last to Leave* by Margaret Clough

The Last to leave is Margaret Clough's second collection of poetry. These poems follow on from her first popular collection, At Least the Duck Survived. The light warm-hearted tone continues as does Clough's engagement with aging and mortality.

Sister Moon by Kirsten Miller

‘There’s no escaping this one,’ he says, but not to me. He says it to the ground and the sky and the thin arms of the waiting trees, but not to me. A film-maker by profession, Catherine has the perfect family: a supportive husband and a bright ten-year-old daughter. But Catherine’s beloved father is deteriorating. As he slips away into dementia, so too does a guilty truth they share: they both know what happened to Devin, Catherine’s sister, a shadow in a beautiful skin. Catherine’s adult success has come at a price. Now she has to come to terms with the silences in her past. Sister Moon is a story of love and growing up, of exclusion and abuse. Moving, and emotionally charged, Kirsten Miller’s second novel renders the insidious consequences of family secrets.

Devil’s Harvest by Andrew Brown

After a secret drone strike on a civilian target in South Sudan, RAF air marshal George Bartholomew discovers that a piece of shrapnel traceable back to a British Reaper has been left behind at the scene. He will do anything to get it back, but he is not the only one.

Dissatisfied with his life and ousted from the marital bed, Associate Professor Gabriel Cockburn, an ambitious botanist at Bristol University, sets out to South Sudan in pursuit of a rare plant that is crucial to his research. Once there, he finds himself caught up in the travails of a young Sudanese woman, Alek, who agrees to guide him through dangerous territory to find the plant. But Alek has an agenda of her own.

As events move beyond their control, the lives of these characters are thrown together, with explosive results.

A political thriller that spans the globe, from the halls of Bristol University and London’s secretive MI6 building to the dusty streets of Juba and the refugee camps in war-torn South Sudan, Devil’s Harvest exposes the dark truths of the international arms trade and the plight of the world’s newest country.

Dark Windows by Louis Greenberg

Johannesburg is becalmed. A wave of New Age belief and an apparent cure for crime have radically altered South Africa’s political landscape.

Jay Rowan has been hired to black out the windows of random vacant rooms. He’s trying to keep out of trouble, but he’s a pawn in political aide Kenneth Lang’s project Dark Windows. A mystical charlatan has convinced Lang’s boss that she can affect the ultimate transformation with a supernatural visitation, the Arrival, and Lang needs to prepare for its coming. When Jay and his married girlfriend Beth realise that someone has died in every room, political and personal tensions come to a head and Jay, Beth and Lang must confront the past they've been trying to avoid.

Dark Windows is a moody, intelligent literary thriller.

Sunderland by Ken Barris & Michael Cope

Unhappily married Cape Town academic Art Berger is offered what appears to be a professional lifeline: to reconstitute the final papers of the great South African writer Charles de Villiers into the novel he was writing at the time of his death. He is uncomfortable about the role of ghostwriter, but the project becomes literary detective-work he cannot give up.

Introduce De Villiers's beautiful daughter Taryn, and Art is ensnared. Sunderland alternates between sections, mostly in journal form, chronicling Art's struggle to make sense of De Villiers's fragmented and disordered text, and sections scenes, notes, outlines from that very work (also entitled 'Sunderland'). This novel of ideas and of character is a fascinating collaboration by two of South Africa's finest and most lauded wranglers of words.
